THE LOST WILL IS WORSE THAN NONE

The lost will is worse than none. And in the case of sudden death the hidden will is often as good as lost. A will should be safeguarded, not hidden. In our Trust Department vaults each will is in a separate sealed envelope. They are indexed so that any given will may be produced at a moment's notice. Each testator has our receipt for his will and while he lives the document will be produced only on his order. Upon the testator's death we deliver his will unopened to the Probate Court.

HOME GUARD AT RIFLE RANGE

Westfield Company Will Do Some Shooting at Caldwell.

At the regular Monday night drill of the Westfield Home Guard company last Monday Capt. Wright had an order read detailing the company to meet on the Washington School campus at 2:30 p. m. next Saturday for a trip to the United States Naval Shooting Range at Caldwell, N. J. The Captain said he was gratified beyond measure by the fine attendance, 63 men out of 79 being present and he desired all who could possibly spare the time to go to make the trip to Caldwell as it would be an excellent opportunity to get some real practice at shooting on the range with the regulation rifle, which he hoped would soon be supplied to the company.

About 50 men reported that they would be able to go. The company will leave Westfield at 3 p. m. in automobiles, which have been generously provided by patriotic townspeople. Each man will take a blanket, overcoat and belt but no arms. Strict military routine will be observed at Caldwell and the company will be housed in the Barracks and on Sunday the shooting on the range will take place. The company will have Saturday night supper, dinner and breakfast and return home at 4:30 Sunday afternoon. Capt. Wright desires every man who was absent last Monday night to report for the trip if it is at all possible.

The company was provided with winter overcoats at last Monday night's turnout and the men looked well in their new attire. Just at the close of the drill First Sergeant Filtcraft, while marching with the company, in turning around to observe the movements of a squad, ran into a tree, which he had not seen, smashing his eyeglasses and bruising his face. His right eye was also bruised. The accident was not serious, however, though the injury was a painful one. The bright glare of the electric lights on the campus has been quite trying at times on the eyes of the officers and men.

"PRIVATE PEAT" AT THE PLAYHOUSE THIS WEEK

Timely of theme and fairly logical in its development, this story has large possibilities, especially with the interesting personality of Private Peat himself injected. The very simplicity of Peat's story proved attractive at the outset—it promised much in the way of contrasting American methods of warfare with those of the Hun—and this preparation arouses interest in what was plainly indicated to be the theme, but the purpose and the original line of action are entirely disregarded while the story takes one turn after another depicting some flashes of action in the trenches and No-Man's Land, winding up with views of Peat in the hospital, writing his book and some philosophical comments on the war.

Private Peat's personality is charming, and he is a good actor besides, but this and the screen illustrations of his personal adventures serve principally as fine publicity for his book. This picture will be shown at the Playhouse Thursday and Friday of this week.
